

Robert Boekhorst is a partner at Netherlands member firm Van Benthem & Keulen, where he specializes in information technology and privacy law. He previously practiced in-house with Koninklijke KPN N.V., which provides telecommunications and information and communication technology services in the Netherlands, the Americas, and internationally. His privacy practice focuses primarily on legal and regulatory issues associated with data processing, international data transfers, and general compliance projects for multinational corporations. He is a graduate of Leiden Law School.

Áine Cadogan is a senior associate on Ireland member firm Mason Hayes & Curran's commercial team and also practices as part of the firm's technology, media and communications team. As part of the firm's data privacy and security team, Ms. Cadogan advises both domestic and multinational technology companies on a wide variety of privacy issues including trans-border data flows, cybersecurity breaches and regulatory audits. She also advises on intellectual property and contractual issues. Ms. Cadogan received her LL.B. from the National University of Ireland.

Claire Clarke is U.K. member firm Mills & Reeve's first female managing partner. Ms. Clarke is principally responsible for directing the firm's 2020 strategy, which is aimed at increasing the firm's revenues to £100 million, as well as expanding the firm's reach across the U.K., including a merger in London, major investments in life sciences and a series of high-profile lateral hires in the firm's Leeds and Manchester offices. In addition to her responsibilities as managing partner, she also practices corporate law in the firm's Cambridge office, helping publicly traded and private companies on a wide range of corporate matters. She completed her legal education at Oxford University.

Glenn Crocker is CEO of BioCity Group, a U.K.-based a life science incubator. An experienced CEO, company founder, and investor in the life sciences sector, he has a D.Phil. in immunology from Oxford University and qualified as a chartered accountant with EY, working primarily with biotechnology companies in Palo Alto, California, and Cambridge, U.K., where he headed up the U.K. biotechnology practice for EY. Dr. Crocker is a non-executive director of a number of companies and consults on business incubation, start-up creation and cluster growth. He has been involved in investing in life science companies through BioCity's own or managed funds since 2006. Dr. Crocker received a Member of the British Empire medal from the Queen of England in 2014 for services to the biotechnology industry.

James Fry is a partner at U.K. member firm Mills & Reeve, where he heads its life sciences practice. He specializes in advising life sciences companies on intellectual property and commercial contracting. Mr. Fry studied chemistry at the University of Sheffield before becoming a lawyer. He has had considerable experience advising pharmaceutical, biotechnology and medical technology businesses and has represented many multinational businesses and large research organizations. Much of his work in the sector is focused on IP commercialization, drafting and negotiating technology transfer agreements, corporate acquisitions and disposals where IP is a key issue, and international IP projects. Mr. Fry has been rated in the foremost legal directories as a leading lawyer for many years and is said to be a "very responsive" partner with "good levels of both U.K. and international knowledge."

Jon Green is vice president of business operations at MedImmune, the global biologics research and development arm of AstraZeneca. Previously, he was a member of the scientific staff in the Imperial College London's biochemistry department and later served as a senior scientific officer with the Medical Research Council. Mr. Green joined Cambridge Antibody Technology in 1992 as a senior scientist, initially working on several drug discovery projects before moving to operational management. He is also chairman of One Nucleus, the largest life sciences membership organization in Europe and sits on the steering committee of the Pharmaceutical Industry Security Forum. Mr. Green has an M.Phil. in molecular biology, is a chartered biologist, a Fellow of the Society of Biology and a Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts and Manufacturing.

Stephen Hamilton is a corporate partner at U.K. member firm Mills & Reeve and has been engaged by and consulted with manufacturers, suppliers, insurers and other stakeholders on legal and regulatory changes affecting the automotive industry. Mr. Hamilton was involved in several of the U.K. government's consultations on testing driverless cars and has consulted at the House of Lords on the topic. He has also participated in research by Transport Systems Catapult, the U.K.'s technology and innovation center for intelligent mobility, on what key actions should be taken to help realize the early benefits of connected and automated vehicles. Mr. Hamilton is a member of the GATEway Project advisory group, which is currently performing autonomous vehicle trials on London's Greenwich peninsula.

Christian Hill is CEO of MAP BioPharma, a market access and government affairs consultancy headquartered in Cambridge, U.K. Mr. Hill is an experienced market access professional with over 18 years of experience in the international biotechnology and pharmaceutical industry. He has been involved in over 50 health technology assessment organizations across Europe and has built a strong network of key influencers including EU and national agencies. Prior to cofounding MAP in 2012, he led market access teams and submissions at InterMune, Gilead, Pfizer and Genzyme on topics ranging from chronic disease to ultra-orphan indications. Mr. Hill is a member of the steering committee of the Ethical Medicines Industry Group in the U.K. and Ireland and a member of the board of directors of the European Confederation of Pharmaceutical Entrepreneurs.

John-Paul Martin is general counsel of Cambridge, U.K.-based Domino Printing Sciences. Through a global network of 25 subsidiary offices and more than 200 distributors, Domino develops, manufactures and sells coding and printing technologies in over 130 countries worldwide with facilities in the U.K., China, Germany, India, Sweden and the U.S. As general counsel, Mr. Martin oversees all legal matters pertaining to the operations of Domino, including compliance and regulatory matters. Prior to becoming Domino's chief legal officer, Mr. Martin was in private law practice, focusing primarily on corporate and commercial matters.

Stephan Menzemer is a partner at Germany member firm Graf von Westphalen, where he focuses his practice on information technology and telecommunications, contracts and healthcare. He counsels leading IT suppliers and users and their management on all matters relating to their core business. He has provided advice in a number of significant German and international IT projects in the industrial, banking, public and IT sectors with the inclusion of near and offshore operations and outsourcing, public-private partnerships and public tenders as well as the establishment and verification of data protection and IT security structures. Mr. Menzemer studied law at the University of Frankfurt am Main, the University of Aix-en-Provence, and the University of Marseille.

Graeme Menzies is of counsel to U.K. member firm Mills & Reeve, where he specializes in resolving complex commercial disputes and leads the firm's North American desk. He advises public and private companies and public institutions, principally universities and healthcare facilities. Mr. Menzies' varied work experience includes fraud and bribery investigations, product recalls, international Internet gaming disputes, corporate warranty claims, shareholder and partnership disputes, and injunction applications to freeze assets and protect intellectual property and confidential information. He is an accredited mediator and member of the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators and the International Bar Association. Mr. Menzies is also chairman of SCG Legal. He completed his law degree at the University of Cambridge.

Michael Miller joined global safety consultancy JMJ Associates as chief legal officer in September 2013, after having spent over 20 years in private law practice advising on a wide variety of matters including complex mergers and acquisitions, private equity transactions, commercial contract matters, joint ventures and business restructurings. Mr. Miller received his J.D. degree from the University of Chicago Law School. He has been ranked among the Best Lawyers® in America for corporate law.

Simon Moynihan is director of legal for Western Europe at global information and asset storage and protection company Iron Mountain. As leader of the Western Europe legal team, he is principally responsible for providing Iron Mountain's business leaders with legal advice in the areas of contracts, procurement, software, anti-bribery and corruption, data protection and privacy, and risk identification and mitigation. He served in 2016 as a corporate mentor in the Law Without Walls program, which is designed to transform the way law and business professionals partner to solve problems. Mr. Moynihan previously was a solicitor in the outsourcing, technology and commercial department at Pinsent Masons. He is a graduate of the College of Law Birmingham.

David Poisson became CEO of SCG Legal in 2011. Previously, he was of counsel to the law firm of Howe Anderson & Steyer in Washington, DC. He was elected in 2005 to the first of two terms in the Virginia General Assembly, where he served as deputy House minority whip. Mr. Poisson was also legislative director and chief counsel to the late Senator Terry Sanford of North Carolina and later served as chief of staff and counsel to then-Representative, now Assistant Senate Minority Leader, Richard Durbin of Illinois. He received his Ph.D. and J.D. from the University of Arizona and his bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Kathleen Porter is an intellectual property and technology partner in the business transactions group at Connecticut member firm Robinson+Cole. She formerly chaired the firm's intellectual property and technology group. Her clients include precision manufacturing, life science, energy, consumer products, software, Internet and e-commerce, and other technology-driven businesses. Ms. Porter counsels clients on the development, protection and commercialization of intellectual property and technology. In particular, she has vast experience with e-commerce and Internet law issues, specifically online contracting including click-through and browse-wrap agreements, mobile applications, social media, online advertising, promotions, blogs, testimonials and sweepstakes, terms of use, electronic signatures and website development, hosting and other Internet-related agreements. Ms. Porter received her J.D. from Western New England University School of Law.

Justin Ripman is senior partner at U.K. member firm Mills & Reeve, where he chairs the board and oversees the firm's strategy across its offices in six cities in England. For the past 25 years he has headed the firm's landed estate practice, representing some of the largest stately homes in the country, providing overall strategic tax and trust advice and dealing with complex trust issues and reorganizations both for U.K. and offshore trustees. He has also previously headed the firm's private client team and been a key player in building private client work as a core sector of the firm. He attended the University of Cambridge.

Deborah Robinson is head of legal at the British Council, which is a U.K.-based international cultural and educational organization founded in 1934 to foster knowledge and understanding between the people of the U.K. and other countries. As chief legal officer, she is responsible for advising the Council's leadership on corporate and commercial law, contracts, information technology and international and cross-border transactions. Prior to joining the Council, Ms. Robinson practiced law at Macfarlanes in London, specializing in property development. She later became European general counsel for Hewitt Associates, now part of global professional services firm Aon. Ms. Robinson studied law at the University of Bristol and King's College London.

Leonid Shapiro is managing partner and founder of Candestic Limited. He is also founding member of Brookstreet Equity Partners, where he is involved in investment strategy and due diligence. Prior to founding Candestic, Dr. Shapiro was a senior consultant at McKinsey & Company. He also has been a consultant to Hewlett-Packard in medical imaging product development. Dr. Shapiro's entrepreneurial ventures include being chief operating officer of a $126 million software company and chief executive officer of a telecommunications firm. Dr. Shapiro received a Ph.D. from Oxford University, a D.Phil. from Magdalen College (Oxford) in radiological imaging, an M.D. from Duke University, and an undergraduate degree in physics from Cornell University.

Richard Susskind is an author, speaker, and adviser to major professional firms and national governments. His main area of expertise is the future of professional services and, in particular, the way in which information technology and the Internet are changing the work of lawyers. Mr. Susskind has written and edited numerous books, including The Future of Law, Transforming the Law, The End of Lawyers?: Rethinking the Nature of Legal Services, The Future of the Professions, and Tomorrow's Lawyers. He is president of the Society for Computers and Law, chairman of the online dispute resolution advisory group of the Civil Justice Council, and chairman of the advisory board of the Oxford Internet Institute, where he is also a visiting professor. Mr. Susskind also teaches at University College London, Gresham College, and the University of Strathclyde in Glasgow. He has a degree in law from the University of Glasgow and a doctorate in law and computers from Balliol College (Oxford).

Peter Wainman is a partner at U.K. member firm Mills & Reeve, specializing in information technology, data protection and privacy law. He recently represented University Hospitals of Leicester in a £600 million IT outsourcing project that ultimately led to the appointment of IBM as "managed business partner." Mr. Wainman headed the firm's team, advised on the application of relevant procurement laws and took responsibility for finalizing the contract with IBM. He is active in the Society for Computers and Law and contributes regularly to the firm's "Technology Law Update," which provides legal news and updates for technology businesses.

Alderman Sir David Wootton served as Lord Mayor of the City of London and elected head of the City of London Corporation from November 2011 to November 2012, during which time he worked on behalf of the U.K.'s financial, professional and business services industry, leading visits to 27 countries and spending three working months abroad. He also used his experience as a lawyer to promote the legal sector during his Mayoralty, promoting London as a global center for dispute resolution. Sir David has been an Alderman of the City of London, representing the Ward of Langbourn, since 2005 and also served as Sheriff of the City from 2009 to 2010. A lawyer by profession, he was a corporate finance partner from 1979 to 2015 at international firm Allen & Overy, where among other things he handled mergers and acquisitions, IPOs, joint ventures and corporate governance matters. He is currently a member of the board of directors of TheCityUK, an industry trade group devoted to promoting the U.K.'s financial services sector, and the Brexit Law Committee.

